Alcohol Resource Pilot Announcement

The NCAA Division III and NASPA Alcohol and Other Drug Collaborative are soliciting participants for the 2013-14 pilot of 360 Proof, a web-based resource to help campuses address alcohol use and its related consequences for all students on campus.

Pilot participants will select involvement on either a basic or case study level. Campuses participating at the basic level will be asked to respond to web surveys throughout the academic year. Those participating at the case study level will be asked to complete the web surveys and participate in phone interviews periodically throughout the year.

Each pilot campus will name two primary contacts -- one from student-affairs and one from athletics -- who will complete a brief training program and lead campus partners through implementation of the 360 Proof resource, including a Campus Program Assessment, Recommended Strategies reference, and an electronic student-directed intervention. The training modules provide the campus with the information necessary to conduct the program, and the campus may opt to participate in a learning collaborative, where opportunities for knowledge sharing and problem solving with other pilot participants and assistance from the NCAA and NASPA will occur via webinar and other virtual formats.

If you believe your campus would be interested in participating in the pilot program to be conducted throughout the 2013-14 academic year, please contact Leah Kareti (lkareti@ncaa.org) to indicate your interest. The Collaborative will follow-up later this summer with detailed information on the administration of the program.
